The Vice-President Overrules All Points of Order Against It and Is Sustained by His Party, Although Several Republicans Voted With the Bemocrats.

SENATE.

The Senate met at 10 o'clock this morning, but no quorum appeared until 10:30.

The question being on the approval of the journal, Mr. Aldrich proceeded to address the Senate. He said that the ournal disclosed the fact that it was the determined policy of the Democratic Senators to prevent any legislation or action unless their wishes as to certain measures should be acceded to. The acilica of the minority was revolutionar; and would be resisted.

Mr. Stewart inquired whether it was proper for the Senate to violate its own lules.

Mr. Aldrich replied that that was a it was clearly the right of the Senate to change its rules.

He then went on to enumerate the important bills pending in the Senate which must be passed before the 4th of March.

Mr. Harris said that unanimous consent would be given by the Democratic side to proceed to the consideration of appropriation bills or any of the bills mentioned by Mr. Aldrich.

Mr. Aldrich.—That is exactly what I have said. If we yield to the dictation of the minority and let it say what legislation shall be considered, everything is all right.

the minority and let it say what legislation shall be considered, everything is all right.

When Mr. Aldrich had concluded his remarks he moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of his resolution for a change of the rules.

A point of order was made that the unfinished business was the motion to correct Tuesday's journal.

The Vice-President said he would hear argument, and discussion is now proceeding on that point.

Mr. Stewart argued strongly on the Democratic side.

The Vice-President has ruled that Mr. Aldrich's motion to proceed to the consideration of the cloture resolution is in order and has overruled the point of order that the question before the Senate was the motion to correct Tuesday's journal.

Mr. Harris appealed from the decision, but the Chair was sustained—yeas 35, nays 30.

Messrs, Teller, Wolcott and Stewart voted with the Democrats.

Mr. Aldrich moved to proceed to consider his resolution and Mr. Gorman Sider his resolution and Mr. Gorman moved to table it.

The Vice-President has submitted the question to the Senate and a vote is now question to the Senate and a vote is now being taken.

The vote resulted: Yeas, 30; nays, 35. 50 the motion to table was lost, and the vote commenced on Mr. Aldrich's motion to consider the cloture rule.

The roll call was suspended on Mr. Hansom's point of order that the journal of Tnesday showed that the matter had already been taken up. The Chair overruled the point of order, and the Democrats took an appeal.

The appeal was defeated and the Chair sustained—yeas 36, nays 27—whereupon Mr. Gorman made a further point of order that Mr. Aldrich's motion must be in writing.

that Mr. Aldrich's motion must be in writing.

The Vice-President sustained this point and Mr. Aldrich's wrote out his motion.

Mr. Aldrich's motion prevailed. Yeas 36 mays 32. Jones of Nevada also joining with the Democrats in opposing it.

Mr. Harris made the point of order that Mr. Aldrich's resolution was defective in that it did not specify what parts of the standing rules of the Senate it was intended to change, and that it modifies rules 5, 6, and 20, which are not mentioned in Mr. Aldrich's motion.

The Vice-President overruled the point of order.

Mr. Harris appealed and took the floor and spoke in support of his view, the Vice-President having reversed his ruling of the other day that an appeal was not debatable, he having already ruled to-day that an appeal is debatable.

While Mr. Gorman had the floor this morning and was reviewing the situation several attempts were made to take him off the floor. One of them was made by Mr. Aldrich. It was met with a cutting flowledge by Mr. Teller, who notified the Senator from Rhode Island that he must not assume the role of a boss of the Senate.

He Is for Hill and Arainst Ghost Dances in the Next Campaign. Said General Spinola this morning: 'Bless you, no! Governor Hill's coming candidacy for the Presidency. Hill will continue to be the leader of the New York Democracy after he comes to the Senate just as he is now. And," continued the General, "Hill will be nominated in '92, and he will sweep the country. The Democratic party won't have any ghost dances in the next Presidential election.

"What do you mean by ghost dances?" asked the reporter.

"Oh, I mean that we will not dance after States that are now rock-ribbed Republican. Our battle-ground is in four Northern States—New York, Indiana, Connecticut and New Jersey. We may as well begin to select the position for our artillery now and let the enemy see us putting it in position. The fighting must be done in these States and the man to carry them is David Bennett Hill."

A SIGNIFICANT PAIR.

Is Ingalls Opposed to the Federal Elections Bill.

A significant pair was announced on the first vote taken in the Senate. Mr. Allison arose and announced that he was paired with Mr. Ingalls on all questions affecting the cloture resolution and the Federal Elections law. As Mr. Allison is in Federal Elections law. As Mr. Allison is in favor of these projects of course Mr. Ingalls is against them.

It is probable that the cloture resolution will be adopted whenever a vote on it can be forced. But this does not by any means indicate that the Elections bill will pass. Indeed, there is good reason to believe that it will not pass.

Senator Washburn of Minnesota said to-day that while he was in favor of adopting cloture he was opposed to the Elections bill and would vote against it. He said there were nine other Republicans who would oppose the passage of the Elections bill. This, of course, would defeat the measure.

LATE PROCEEDINGS YESTERDAY. An Amusing Scene in the Senate-Confusion in the House. The Senate continued in session yester day until midnight. After The Carrie's report closed Mr. Eustis addressed the Senate in opposition to the Elections bill, Senate in opposition to the Elections bill, although the question was on a motion to amend the journal of Tuesday. He stirred up Mr. Hoar by calling up the fugative slave riots and the destruction of convents by Know-nothing mobs. Mr. Hoar took the floor to reply and was making a bitter and effective attack on Louislann, incidently scoring Senator Eustis. Mr. Hoar, as he warmed up to his work, advanced from his desk toward the Democratic side two or three steps at a time shaking his fist vehemently at Mr. Eustis to whom he was directing his remarks. After several of these advance movements he came to the centre aisle where he paused for a moment. Then he made as though he were going to cross the aisle in his charge upon the Louislanian. Mr. Eustis started back, both hands upon the arms of his chair, while a look of muck terror overspread his countenance; then, as Mr. Hoar started out on a fresh denunciation, Mr. Eustis quickly arose and with his face turned lower he was denuity and

The conclusion of Mr. Blaine's dispatch must be highly gratifying to every patriotic American. Referring to Lord Salisbury's offer of arbitration, he rejects its terms, but not the principle it proposes. What we demand is—everything that England conceded to Russia when the Czarenjoyed the sovereignty he transferred to us. This Lord Salisbury professes himself willing to grant. The question at issue is only as to the nature and extent of that concession, and upon this question Mr. Blaine cordially invites the offer of arbitration.—New York Tribuae. as Mr. Hoar started out on a fresh denun-ciation, Mr. Eustis quickly arose and with his face turned toward his antagonist and still wearing that amusing expression of mack fright he stepped briskly back among his fellow-Democrats and sank with an air of relief in a vacant chair which was flanked by able-todied Demo-cratic Senators. The whole audience— Senators, officers, pages and the galleries, which were crowded—broke out into open laughter. The effect of Mr. Hoar's earn-est, almost tragic, speech was lost amidst the laughter which greeted this bit of high comedy. Mr. Eustis' facial expression during this scene would have done credit to Joe Jefferson. Mr. Hoar returned to his seat and soon finished his remarks. Mr. Eustis looked up at the galleries and smiled his thanks for the quick appreciation they had shown for his masterly bit of comedy.

Mr. Carlisle then took the floor and made an able and about the only speech directed wholly to the motion before the House.

House.

Mr. Vest then got the floor and held it until midnight, being frequently interrupted by points of no quorum and consequent roll-calls. At midnight the Republicans gave up the contest for the time being and allowed an adjournment.

sequent roll-calls. At midnight the Republicans gave up the contest for the time being and allowed an adjournment.

After the journal was approved in the House yesterday the proceedings continued amidst great confusion and a display of feeling almost unprecedented. Mr. Cannon's resolution to limit debate on the District Appropriation bill was the pending question. Major McKinley took the floor and added to the tumuit by an emphatic indorsement of the Speaker. He declared that if need be the House would stay in session until the clock chimed the hour of noon on the 4th of March in order to pass a bill which would give to every citizen in the land his right to a free ballet and a fair count. This declaration was vociferously applauded by the Republicans.

Continuing, Major McKinley said of the criticisms of and assaults upon the Speaker: "Whatever criticism is deserved by the gentleman who presides over this House is shared by every one of his colleagues on this side. [Republican applause]. Never has a parliamentary decision been made by the Speaker that has not met the approval of the majority of the House."

After ruling that several motions made by Democrats were dilatory, and refusing to entertain them, the Speaker said:

"The Chair thinks it apparent, from the whole course of proceedings to-day, that the motion is a dilatory one, and so rules. The Chair regrets to exercise the power, but exercises it, believing his duties enjoin it upon him."

After protests from Messrs. Springer and McMillan, the Speaker ordered a roll-call on Mr. Cannon's resolution. It proceeded amid great confusion. The result as announced was yeas, 153; nays, 124.

A motion to reconsider, made by Mr. Springer, was disregarded, and the tumult continued, the House being in Committee of the Whole. The feeling which existed on both sides was well shown in the sharp remark of the usually cool and courteous Breckinridge of Kentucky to Mr. Cutcheon for him to mind his own business, and by the astounding assertion of Mr. Allen of Michigan that Democrat was out of order by being dia-tory.

Finally the committee rose and re-ported the bill back to the House, with amendments. After more confusion, the first amendment was adopted by a yea and nay vote. On the vote on the second amendment, the Democrats left the House, leaving only about a half-dozen to watch the proceedings. This broke the quorum and the House was compelled to addorn.

GROULS IN HUMAN FORM.

Daring Case of Body Snatching Brought to Light. A daring case of body snatching was brought to light to-day and the probabil-ities are that some arrests will follow. On December 18 the funeral of Nathaniel Lee, a young colored man, who died from typhoid fever, took place from his home, No. 432 Temple Court. As the family had not selected a lot the body was placed in the vault of the Harmony Cemetery near try City. The agreement between the family and the cemetery authorities was that the body was to be retained there one mouth and five dollars was paid for the use of the vault.

On the 18th Mr. John Robinson, the uncle, and Sarah Brown, the aunt of the deceased, went to the cemetery, with the intention of having the body interred, but they were informed that the burial had already been made.

They were shown a new-made grave that was supposed to contain the remains. Mr. Robinson was not satisfied, however, and he paid $50 to assist in making an investigation, the outcome of which was that the body was discovered in the dissecting-room of one of the medical universities.

The wife testified that he came home drunk last night and cut the bedelothes in strips with a razor and then broke the bedstead into fragments with a hatchet. Afterward he began to beat her and her cries for help brought in the neighbors.

A Crazy Freak. A white man named John Graves, who either crazy or drunk, ran a horse down Pennsylvania avenue this afternoon and collided with a cable car at Seventh street and then with a herdic at the National Hotel.

cretion in five acts and six tableaux, by Ernst II., reigning Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, was produced at the Metropolitan Opera House last night, and proved a gloomy failure. Ernst II. was not a giddy boy when, in 1858, he composed his "Diana." He is now a venerable duke of over 70, though he is still an aspirant to artistic popularity.

Everybody went about last night asking everybody else why a ducal effort, which had no merit, should have been singled out for the honor of performance on the boards of the Metropolitan Opera House.

But nobody would say.

House.

But nobody would say.

There is absolutely nothing in "Diana of Solange" to excuse or explain its production. It is a feeble imitation of Meyerbeer, without one solitary inspiration to redeem its dull and desperate monotony.

Some one said that Ernst II, had learned a great deal from Wagner. He conceals his second-hand science most effectually in this opera.

It is written in the good old-fashioned style. Each act is cut up into arias and dios and trios, connected by recitative and interrupted by ballets. The melody is trite, the orchestration weak beyond words.

"I am serry the gentleman made a failure. The Clerk will proceed to read the journal," calmly responded the Speaker, and the Clerk read.

Several correspondents in the press gallery made a count, but they were only able to find 167 members.

Mr. Springer of Illinois—I demand the reading of the journal in full.

The journal was approved.

Under the resolution adopted by the House vesterday that body this afternoon ended the long fight over the District bill by passing it. An amendment was adopted striking out the provision to pay the Register of Wills $150 for preparing papers for the appointment of guardians to enable indigent boys to enlist in the Navy. Another amendment, increasing from $5,000 to $10,000 the appropriation for the condemnation of streets, roads and alleys, was adopted.

Mr. Sayres of Texas wanted to get in an amendment in regard to assessments, but Mr. McComas, who had charge of the bill, objected. He said that he thought that before long a bill dealing with that subject would be reported from the District Committee.

An amendment providing that in the settling of the accounts of the District Commissioners not more than $20,000 should be expended and that a report of the matter should be made to the Senate.

At 1:45 o'clock the final vote on the bill was ordered. It resulted—ayes, 139, nays, 83.

The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the Naval Appropriation bill, Mr. Burrows in the chair. Debate on this bill is to be limited to four hours.

made by telegraph operators in transmitting messages, says the Hartford Courant, but it is seldom that one is recorded so amusing in its consequences as occurred in the summer to a gentleman of this city.

He was spending his vacation at the shore. A dance was to be given one evening, and, as Mr. — expected his brother down from this city to attend the festivities, he bethought himself of the excellent plan of sending to him for some flowers, which are always acceptable to the young ladies on such occasions.

The scheme was no sooner conceived than it was put into execution. The telegraph office was sought and the following message was written and directed to Mr. — 's brother in Hartford:

"Bring three dozen Bon Silene roses."

With a tranquil mind and a happy heart Mr. — awaited the simultaneous arrival of his brother, the roses, and the eventful evening. But meanwhile the telegraph operator had got in his work either at one end of the line or the other and so far no one was the wiser.

telegraph operator had got in his work either at one end of the line or the other and so far no one was the wiser.

Mr. —'s plans for the distribution of the roses were doubtless well settled, and he eagerly awaited his brother's arrival. At length the latter hove in sight; but, goodness gracious! what was the matter with him? He was loaded down with bundles, and out of his pockets still peeped others. In fact, it seemed to be only with difficulty that he could get along at all, so weighted down was he with mysterious packages.

After partially recovering from his surprise Mr. — demanded to know what in the world his brother was swearing at. The latter, as soon as he had breath enough, demanded in his turn, in an injured tone of voce, to know why he had sent for so many. "I brought all I could," he added, "and that was two dozen and a-half."

"So many what?" returned Mr. —. "What have you got there anywa?"

"What have you got there, anyway?"
The brother's suspicions began to be aroused and he said nothing, but drew forth the telegram which he had received: "Bring three dozen beers sub rosa,"

As he entered the car at East Buffalo he saw at a glance that there was one seat with a young lady in it and he marched straight down the aisle, deposited his grip and overcoat, sat down and familiarly observed:

"I entirely forgot to ask your permis-sion."

"That's of no consequence," she replied.
"Thanks. Traveling alone, eh?"
"Almost, but not quite. My husband is in the smoker, my father and brother are in the seat back of us, and the two gentlemen across the aisle are my uncles. The conductor, who is a cousin of mine, has just gone forward, but will return soon, and I will introduce you to my aunt if you will go back a few seats." "Aw! Aw! I see!" gasped the man, and the floor of the car became suddenly so red hot that he picked up his baggage and his feet and lit out for the next one ahead.

"Heautiful," says the critic, "is, of course, the epithet used by the school-girl to indicate a scoree of different kinds of excellence, or of what she considers excellence, but no word can be dennided of its true utility by fatuous indiscriminateness of application, and every now and then one comes across a book which, whatever other charms it may possess, has, above and beyond them all, the charm of beauty pure and simple, which affects us just in the same way that we are affected by the sight of a lovely woman or a fair landscape.

It has grace, it has pathos, it has the fascination which belongs to the lifelike embodiment of a winning ideal, and it has from first to last a very rare perfection of artistic manipulation; but it is only when we come to analyze our impressions that we think of these things separately. So long as we do not think, but simply feel, we are conscious only of the effect of beauty produced by their harmonious and satisfying combination.

Spontaneous Combustion. Medical literature of this country, as well as that of England, France and Ger-well as that of England, France and Germany, relates many instances of the spontaneous combustion of the human body, the victim always being a person addicted to the use of spirituous liquors either as a beverage or in the form of a bath. About a year ago we gave an account of a drunkard on the Pacific coast whose breath caught fire while he was attempting to light a cigar at a gas jet, the flames utterly burning the interior of the chest to a crisp, of course resulting in the death of the unlucky individual.

The following, taken from the memoirs of Biauchini, originally appeared in the Amual Register and is concerning the remarkable case of combustion of the body of the Countess Bandi of the city of Cesena, Italy: One evening the Countess felt an unusual drowsiness and retired early, her maid remaining with her until she had fallen asleep. Next morning when the girl called to awaken her mistress she found nothing but the charred remains of the Countess lying in a heap in the middle of the floor, the unconsumed portions, feet, legs, hands and fingers, still glowing with a clear white heat.

In the centre of the heap lay the head, fingers, still glowing with a clear white heat.

In the centre of the heap lay the head, the brain and chin having been consumed, the posterior portion of the cranium, with the parts above mentioned, being all that was left of the lady except a small heap of ashes. Two tallow candles that had been blown out and left on the table were found to be melted, the wicks remaining, which clearly proved that they had not been consumed in the regular way. Nothing in the apartment had been injured in the least by the remarkable case of combustion that had taken place within its walls, but everything—furniture, tapestry, bedelothes, etc.—was literally covered with a peculiar damp, sootlike substance which had even penetrated the drawers of bureaus and soiled the liness.

Articles in a dining-room adjoining were also coated with the slimy soot, a piece of bread in a cupboard being turned a jet black on account of it. This was given to a stray dog, but was refused, as if thad been poison. The Register adds that, while the Countess was not addicted to the use of strong drink, she had for years been accustomed to daily bathe, her body in camphorated spirits of wine. The dinner of the New York Confederate Veteran Camp at the New York Hotel on Monday evening last was an occasion to be remembered. Aside from Colone Marshall, who was the chief of General Lee's staff, there were a number of men present who have figured conspicuously in history. Colonel Marshall now lives in Baltimore, and he is, it is said, the only surviving member of General Lee's old staff. By the side of General Enderwickles at the guest table sat General E. Alexander, the chief of Longstreet's artillery. It was General Alexander who gave the signal for the terrible cannonade at Gettysburg on the last day of the fight, and it was upon his direction that Pickett's division moved to its famous charge against the Federal centre. General Sickles, in his remarks, playfully insisted that it was one of Alexander's guns that shot off his leg on the second day at Gettysburg, but he divided his rations of whee with him just the same. Bishop Potter received much consideration from the "veets," as did General Oates of Alabama, the man whose regiment came near holding Little Round Top and who lost an arm in front of Richmond in 1854 fighting against Hancock's men. ate Veteran Camp at the New York Hotel
